Download the Library Access Extension. Enjoy smart access, while you browse!

Quick and easy

The Library Access Browser Extension helps you access digital content offered by the National Library, while browsing and searching the internet as you normally do.

Go to www.leanlibrary.com/download, install the extension in your browser and select your institution (Bibliothèque nationale du Luxembourg). You are set!

The extension works behind the scenes to integrate the digital National Library with your browsing activity

How does it work?

Whenever you want to access or search the internet for articles, journals, ebooks or databases, you may find content licensed by the National Library. But since you are not logged in with your library card, you do not have access. Until now, you had to manually check availability at www.a-z.lu.

The Library Access Browser Extension checks library availability automatically. If available, you are redirected, automatically.

Note: You will be asked to login to www.a-z.lu with your library card.

There's more!

If the National Library doesn't have an article available, the Library Access Browser Extension looks for an Open Access version of that article, including pre- and post prints.

Plus: Whenever you use Google Scholar or PubMed for searches, the Library Access Browser Extension ensures that library links (Look for "findit.lu") are displayed directly in Google Scholar and PubMed. That way you do not need to manually set up Google Scholar and PubMed.

Finally, ebooks are also supported by the Library Access Browser Extension. If an ISBN is detected on a webpage and the National Library has a licensed eBook, a popup offers you a link.

More information

The Library Access Browser Extension is managed by the National Library of Luxembourg's consortium.lu service. It is also available for registered users of Uni.lu, LIST.lu and LIH.lu, just select your institution in the extension preferences.
